

Search term recommendation and non-textual ranking evaluated

Philipp Mayr, Peter Mutschke, Philipp Schaer, York Sure
GESIS Leibniz Institute for the Social Sciences

9th European NKOS Workshop at the 14th ECDL Conference
Glasgow, Scotland

9th September 2010

Topic of the talk

1. Value-added services to improve the search in Digital Libraries (DL)
 - Short introduction of the services
2. Results from a retrieval evaluation exercise
 - Evaluation of a KOS-based Search Term Recommender (STR)
 - Evaluation of re-ranking approaches: Bradfordizing and author centrality

Situation

Major difficulties in most text-oriented DL

1. Vagueness between search and indexing terms (language problem)
2. Too much documents and unstructured result sets (information overload)
3. Pure text-statistical rankings (e.g. tf-idf) have serious weaknesses (short document problem)

Consequence: Users are unsatisfied with a retrieval system and search is far beyond its possibilities

IRM project

Funded by DFG (grant number INST 658/6-1)

Motivation:

- Implementation and evaluation of value-added services for retrieval in DL
- Using science models (specialties in languages, networks of authors, centrality of journals) (Bates, 1990)
- Improvement of search results/experience:
 - Search term recommendation (bridge between user and controlled specialized vocabulary/ies)
 - Non-textual ranking techniques (providing computational approaches to rank documents, provide context)

Search Term Recommender (STR)

Recommendation of highly associated controlled terms

Expansion of the top n ranked controlled terms

Query: jugendsoziologie

Search

Only show metadata sets which include an abstract (slower)

Controlled context:

Statistical relations:

- Co-word analysis
- Complete database and KOS as training set
- Automatic mapping of terms

Total hits: 2699

1. Neidhardt, Friedhelm (1973): Beitraege zur Kritik der Jugendsoziologie und Jugendforschung in Deutsche Jugend Zeitschrift für Jugendfragen und Jugendarbeit Bd. 21 H. 4 (0012-0332) toggle details

Make use of knowledge/specialties in a KOS and the statistical relations computed by the co-word analysis

Example

- Starting with a unspecific term “Unemployment”
- Pure text-based standard ranking produces many and relatively poor results
- STR recommends controlled terms from a pre-selected KOS (thesaurus)

Query:

Total hits: 9902

1. by Herbert Leder (1963): Unemployment benefit and unemployment assistance toggle details
2. (1939): Black coffins and the unemployed toggle details

Service: Reranking (Bradfordizing)

Sorting central papers in core journals/publishers on top

- A build-in functionality of the SOLR system aggregates articles
- The frequency counts of the journals are used to boost documents

Main questions

- What is examined?
 - the quality of different services to improve search
 - or the quality of the associated search of the services
- Can we improve search in a DL with different KOS-enhanced databases?
 - In one discipline
 - Between at least two disciplines
- The services are helpful to whom?
 - Experts/scientists
 - Students

Evaluation

10 different topics from the CLEF conferences (title and descriptions), 73 LIS students, German SOLIS database as test collection

1. Selection of a topic
2. Assessment of documents: top 10 ranked documents for each service
 - STR
 - BRAD
 - AUTH
 - SOLR (tf-idf as baseline)
3. Evaluation of the relevance assessments (MAP, P@10)

Operationalization

All terms and topics are translated from German

Original query for the service SOLR:

povert* AND german*

STR: Expanded STR-enhanced query:

(povert* AND german*) OR "poverty" OR "Federal Republic of Germany" OR "social assistance" OR "immiseration" (highest confidence value)

BRAD: top 10 documents after BRAD-reranking (most frequent core journal)

AUTH: top 10 documents after AUTH-reranking (highest betweenness value)

Topics

- 73 assessors did 3,196 single relevance judgments
- topic 83 was picked 15 times – topic 96 twice
- fair and moderate inter-rater agreement

Results

Number of documents judged relevant by the assessors per topic

- STR by adding the 4 descriptors with the highest confidence
- STR was best service (topics 88, 110, 166 and 173 with an improvement of 20% at least compared to the baseline)

10 topics
 1 database
 top 10 docs
 4 services
 73 students

Results

Precision for each topic and service

- Weaknesses of each service on a concrete topic can be observed
- Different thresholds applied make a more diverse result

Schaer et al.

Results

Read: SOLR and STR have 14 document intersections from 100 possible (for all 10 topics)

Mayr et al., submitted

- 36 intersections of suggested top n=10 documents over all topics and services
- Total of 400 documents: (4 services * 10 per service * 10 topics)
- Result sets are close to disjoint, services provide quite different views onto the document space

Implications

1. Precision values of the retrieval services are the same or better than standard text-statistical ranking (tf-idf)
2. Each service produces its own document space (measured in intersections)
3. Each service has weaknesses which can have implication on the relevance ratio
 - STR: misleading search terms (statistical artefacts) but high descriptive power of controlled terms
 - BRAD: high frequent but some irrelevant journals (outdated)
 - AUTH: central but misleading authors

Next steps

Searching and evaluating in a multi-thesauri-scenario (connecting STR services)

Interactive retrieval with services support

Evaluation of scientists on their specific research topics

Evaluation of combination of services

Reimplementation of the commercial categorizer

Short conclusions

1. Valuable alternative views on document spaces -> especially in interactive retrieval (?)
2. Improved relevance ratio and low overlap of the services results
3. Contexts matter!
 - Providing context to stimulate and support users
 - Support interactive systems for exploration
